A Personal Message from Sue Bond

Dear Fellow Inspiration Lover,

Thank you for being an inspirational quotes subscriber. As you know, an inspiring story or quote can remind us of our tremendous potential and resiliency as humans. They can give us hope.

Here are five suggestions for using daily quotes in your life:

1. As a Resource

Whenever you want to read a quote just open this Quotes ebook.

2. To Solve a Challenge.

Think of a challenge you are having. Then pick a number between 1 and 176 and read the corresponding quote. Another way is to close your eyes and cursor down to a quote (if online) or turn to a page (if printed) and stop when it feels right. Whichever quote your cursor or finger points at can provide a clue or insight to your challenge. Try the quote on and see if it resonates as a possible solution to your challenge or if it sparks some ideas for solutions.

3. As a Source of Discussion

Pick a quote, whether from this ebook or another source, and have a dialogue with your kids, partner, or friends about it. What do they think the quote means? How could they use the quote in their life?

4. To Inspire and Motivate

Use a quote in your classroom or workplace to inspire and motivate. You could post it on a bulletin board and/or discuss it.

Quotes & Sayings to Inspire You – Volume 1

5. Self-Inspiration

Choose a quote that embodies a quality you wish to integrate in your life. Read the quote and think about or journal about how you could live this quote in your life. Also consider what your life could be like if you were living this quote. Read the quote every day and take daily actions that align your life with the message in the quote. Keep track of the results and serendipitous surprises in your life.

About Sue Bond

What do the Olympic Games, books like Tuesdays with Morrie & Man's Search for Meaning, and movies like Blind Side all have in common?

They're all inspiring stories about human potential - the potential we each have to succeed in life with our given talents. The capacity and resiliency we have to survive and thrive by choosing our thoughts and attitude.

The patterns in a person's life can show you what they truly care about and value. My favourite class in university was the one on, you guessed it - human potential.

I've been involved in the field of human potential and personal development for 20 years. As a former athlete, fitness consultant, and life coach - creating a site on inspiration and human potential was a perfect mix.
